Cranky?

We are all cranky about something. Some of us know it and some don't. A customer told us the other day we were on the one price idea. He wanted us to sell him our all wool black square cut cheviot four-fifty suit for even four. Of course we couldn't do it, but to please him we picked up the same price suit in a blue and asked him six for it—he offered five-fifty for it—we took him up and he was delighted. After getting his five-fifty we told him we had robbed him of a dollar and unwrapped the suit and showed him the mark in plain figures on the ticket $4.50 and then handed him back his dollar.

Now which way had you rather trade? we asked. HE saw the point and we believe you do too.

IF IT IS NEW AND TRUE THIS COLUMN HAS IT.

Fatal Wreck—Political Pickup—Hunters Leave Big Baptisms—Rhe Broke—Terrible Mistake—Arrest.

Cotton Crop Estimate.

The estimate of the cotton crop made by Latham, Alexander & Co., places the crop at 6,435,000 bales, and was based upon estimates given in 2,682 letters received from reliable correspondents, banks, bankers, cotton commission merchants, brokers, proprietors of public gins, railroad officials and planters, covering every cotton-growing county in the south. The letter upon the crop conditions, the letter of Latham, Alexander & Co., says:

"In addition to the injury the crop had previously suffered, the excessive heat during the latter part of August and month of September caused the plants to mature prematurely, to shed its fruit, dry up and lose the top growth."

By reason of the long continued dry weather picking is farther advanced than ever before known—in some sections already entirely over—and the crop has been marketed with unusual rapidity. Few correspondents report any disposition on the part of planters to hold back their cotton."

The Drink Proved Fatal.

Geo. C. Pritchett, of Madisonville, for years a well known and popular city drummer for Diehl & Lord, Nashville, died at his home, Friday under singular circumstances. Upon awakening that morning Mr. Pritchett took a drink from a bottle which he supposed contained whisky, but which in reality was filled with a preparation of glycerine, water and carbolic acid, which had been used by some of his family for chapped lips and hands. Mr. Pritchett was visited with violent pains and soon lost consciousness. Death ensued before a physician could arrive in response to a call.

Cadie Proved Fatal.

W. H. Hancock was elected police judge of Cadiz, by 12 votes over J. E. Edwards. The Progressive ticket for councilmen won over the Citizens ticket, except in one instance, H. H. Garton, the Republican member, dropping 6 or 8 votes behind and letting C. H. Hawkins in from the Citizens' ticket. The councilmen elected were W. H. White, J. N. Bradwin, M. S. Thompson, B. F. Gandy, L. Lindsay and C. H. Hawkins.

Miss Mattie Mason Injured.

For several weeks Miss Mattie Mason, a young lady of the Laytonsville neighborhood, has been sick, and one morning last week she attempted to walk across the floor. She became dizzy and fell, hitting the floor, breaking both breaking several ribs. The injury has caused her much suffering, but at last accounts she was slowly improving.

Another One Captured.

The fourth arrest for complicity in the assassination of Hewlett Howton, in Caldwell, has been made. W. M. Gibbons was caught in Hopkins county and is now in jail at Princeton. He was indicted along with about a dozen others at the last term of court.

A Blow Causes Insanity.

Jas. Majors, of Henderson, was brought to the asylum last Thursday. During the encampment of State Guards last summer at Henderson, Majors was struck on the head with a club by a negro and it is thought that the blow caused his insanity.

Wanted in Clarksville.

Chief Klitzke captured Jim Carney, a Clarksville negro, Friday and lodged him in jail to await Tennessee officers. Carney is charged with "holding up" a man about two months ago, near Clarksville, and relieving him of considerable cash.

A Very Successful Meeting.

The protracted meeting which had been in progress at Rich Station for two weeks, closed Friday night. Rev. Fowler conducted the meeting and large crowds were on hand at every service. A large number of persons united with the church, all of whom were baptized Sunday.

Burglars Make a Raid.

Friday night burglars entered the house of Jim Henry Quarles, a negro barber, and carried off a number of valuable articles. The thieves entered the building by prising open a window.

The Case Was Dismissed.

Ed Clifpatrick, the negro boy who killed Jas. Harris with a stick at Barnesley, was acquitted at the exam-

AROUND AND ABOUT.

At Des Arc, Ark., Lon Ballou, a young business man, was shot and killed by his wife.

Charles Dana Gibson, the artist of New York, and Miss Irene Langhorne were married at Richmond, Va., last week.

The Judges of the Court of Appeals have decided that Judge-elect George Dulles should qualify as soon as he receives his commission.

Jay L. Perry, Joe Shelton, John E. Robotic, Fred Richards, Pete Hines and Dr. R. M. Perry were elected trustees of Russellville.

At Danville Alex Rice, colored, who shot and killed Simon Higgins, was sentenced to the penitentiary for twenty-one years.

Marion elected as Councilman J. P. Pierce, Dr. R. L. Moore, J. J. Bennett, J. H. Hubbard and I. F. Dodge. W. B. Yandell was chosen police judge.

Sturgis elected the following officials: W. J. Bishop, police judge; W. P. Dyer, J. H. Bailey, Shelly Bennett, J. J. Bradburn and Wilson Lamb, councilmen.

While a fashionable wedding was being performed in St. George's church, New York City, Thursday afternoon, a sum of the "groom" expired in the vestry.

Thornton Morris, aged 80 and Miss Emma Haugabrook, age not given, were married at Mayeville on the platform. "It is better to be an old man's darling than a young man's slave."

Captain F. D. Walker, late of Honolulu, has petitioned the British government for redress and $3,000 damages, having been detained as a revolutionist, suspected by the Hawaiian government.

Over 200 licenses to kill deer have been issued in Traverse City, Mich. The only woman in the list is Miss Edna Murru, a pretty 15-year-old girl, who goes with her father every fall and is an expert with a gun.

The champion fat man of the world now in Paris, M. Caudron Berger, who is of Swiss origin, weighs something over 600 pounds. His health is excellent, and his appetite takes in enough food for five persons.

J. W. Cadman, of Chicago, who shot himself several days ago, died from the effects of the bullet wound in his head. He was Indian Agent in South Dakota and was an uncle of Mrs. Cleveland. No adequate reason has been given for his act.

John Woods, near Richmond, Ky., struck his son, aged 14, with an ax handle, the boy soon dying. Reports are that he was quarreling with his wife, and was about to shoot her, when the son took his mother's part. This infuriated Woods.

Mrs. Eva McBeath Hunter, who but two weeks ago was married to H. Thomas Hunter, of Leitchfield, died Saturday night at McDaniels, of congestive chills. Her wedding usher was her pall bearer.

Reports state that copper and iron have been discovered on the plantation of Georgia Red in a great country, in the mountains. Samples of the ore have been sent to New York for analysis, and it is thought that it will pay largely to have these ore banks worked, as they are located near the L. & N. railroad.

Miss Maggie Bishop, the fearless young girl, who donned boy's attire and freed their lover, William Johnson, from the Woodstock jail, waived preliminary examination this morning and, without bond, is remanded to jail to await the action of the grand jury. Her youth, prepossessing appearance and heroic act have excited the admiration and sympathy of the public, and a strong effort is being made to have her released.

Nearly every family in the United States keeps a bottle of whiskey well in the house. This applies as well to Iowa, Kansas and Vermont, as to States where it is prohibited.

Some keep it as a beverage, some as a tonic, some as a medicine. In either case it is important that it should be old and pure.

L. W. Harper's Nelson County, Ky., Whiskey has been examined by the leading chemists throughout the country and its purity has in every case been highly recommended.

PRESIDENT TYLER'S SON.
Aged, an invalid and living in Great Poverty.

From the white house to a humble home, from a position of wealth to poverty, is the fate which has come to one who once held a high position, says the St. Louis Republic. This is the son of President Tyler, who for years has lived in a plain house in Georgetown. The house is a brick house, plain and neat in appearance. On the second floor is the chamber of Tyler, now an aged man, an invalid.

"It was during my father's administration," he said to a reporter, "that the famous bank bill was agitated, and it was vetoed by him, thus bringing into effect the practice, which placed upon the shoulders of the president alone the responsibility of all the finances of the country. The white house swarmed with bankers, anxious to be made agents of the government in the matter. I was as father's private secretary, a post then not recognized nor paid for by the government.

"Several bankers came down from New York and asked me to get them appointed as financial agents, and one came one day and told me that if I would secure him the place he would place a check for fifty thousand dollars to my credit in his bank. I refused, and he was as astonished, saying he understood that was the way things were managed in Washington.

On board the Princeton the day the big plot disclosed and killed many of the cabinet, he was a warm friend of mine. Contrary to the usual belief, the first telegraph message ever sent was not: "What wonders God hath wrought!" but from my father to Chief Justice Taney, who was at the moment it was received in the depot of the B. & O. railroad in Baltimore. It was merely a formal greeting. This was the day the test took place.

John Tyler is more than 80 years old, and has served in two armies, having equipped a regiment for the war with Mexico, and having served in the civil war on the eastern side. He says that so far from profiting by the many offers he had, he left the executive mansion so poor he was forced to sell his watch for twenty dollars.

HER DERELICTION.

An Episode in the Family of the Emancipated Woman.

"Laura," said the husband of the emancipated woman, sternly.

"What is it, dear?" asked the latter, in a conciliatory manner, for she saw that trouble was coming.

"Laura, in the last three weeks I have given you three letters to mail, addressed to dear papa. What have you done with them?"

"Mailed them, of course," replied the wretched woman, in a determination to bluff it out if possible.

"Laura," the husband went on, "that is not true. I received a letter from papa to-day to tell him he had not received one from me for months, and anxiously asking if anything is the matter. Now you have got those letters somewhere about your clothes, if you haven't lost them. I know just as well as I know that I am standing here that you never mailed those letters. Now go through your pockets and see if you haven't got them."

The emancipated woman commenced to look through her pockets, and soon turned out the missing letters, which she laid on the table, with the remark: "Well, I may have sworn that I put those letters in the letter-box at the corner."

The man sneered. "You can't do anything," he retorted. "Here, I'll mail my own letters, and I won't occupy your valuable time with such cranks. Before you go I want ten dollars for household expenses."

The emancipated woman meekly laid the money down on the table, and went away with the remark that she would leave the office early in the afternoon and come home after her husband to take him to the matrice.

Before you go I want ten dollars for household expenses."

Injured by a Meteorite.

Robert Abbott, a boy of Cuday, Ireland, was about to step outside the door of his house recently when he saw in the sky, toward the west, a curious appearance, which he described as "a great shining mass, far larger than the sun." It came toward him and when quite near it burst into seven shining fragments, one of which appeared to be coming straight to him. He raised his hands to shield his face. Suddenly there was a noise like the firing of a gun, and a cry: "O, dad! I shot 'em shot!" The father and mother rushed out and found his hands mangled and bleeding, the tops of three fingers having been taken off the left hand, while the fingers of the right hand were blackened. The face was slightly grazed. This mysterious accident was believed to have been caused by an meteorite.—London Spectator.

PROFESSIONAL SECRETS.

An English Journal's Opinion of How They Are Kept.

It is a Rare Thing for Any Master or Practitioner to Intrude on Doctors or Lawyers to Leak Out—Politically Confidential.

Our own opinion, says the London Spectator, is that doctors and lawyers do keep professional secrets most rigidly, and that it is the rarest thing in the world for any master of importance to leak out. It is curious, but a fact, that the main secret, as far as we can learn, of confidences, strictly and respectfully confided, is one of the commandments of virtues. A man may be selfish, corrupt, cynical, cruel, hard, and in every way what the world calls a "pretty bad man," but it is ten to one against his not admitting the obligation upon him to keep secrets confided to him in the belief that he will keep them. A man may be capable of killing you for your money, or of doing you out of your whole fortune, and yet not wantonly betray your secrets.

But though we do not believe that there is any real need for fear in regard to the disclosure of professional secrets, we cannot dispense from our minds facts in connection with the subject. We find, for instance, that there is a good deal of uneasiness in regard to the want of care in guarding secrets by the two great professions. The second is that the doctors and lawyers by their manner of talking do a good deal to encourage the vague and general dread to which we have alluded. The members of the two professions do not betray the confidences confided to them, but they do sometimes talk in a way which might lead timid and sensitive people to think that they do. It is not unknown to see a doctor or a lawyer in after-dinner talk dancing on the edge of the precipice of professional secrecy. For a man of strong nerves the spectacle is interesting and diverting.

One knows that the dancer is perfectly safe, and that in spite of the fear that to disclose there is the lightest fear of his toppling over. He seems to be telling a great deal, to be perfectly open and frank about the strange experiences which he has come across in his practice, and the odd people who have consulted him in reality he tells you nothing whatever.

It is all a triumph of that slight of tongue which Lord Palmerston is said to have practised to perfection. He would talk to a man for an hour on high politics, and appear to be letting out cabinet secrets by the bagful, and the listener felt half-flattered, half-horrified, at hearing so many things which ought never to have been told outside the big drawing-room in Downing street. When, however, the talk was over, and the recipient of the material confidences tried to recall his remarks, he found to his astonishment that he had heard nothing which was not to be found in that morning's Times. The confidences were all a matter of manner—stage effects, and nothing more. But though the experienced man of the world may realize that this professional dancing on the edge of the precipice is merely a game, and in general a perfectly safe one, the ordinary person is apt to be made extremely nervous by the display. "He'll be over as sure as fate," is his thought, and he reflects with horror that if these things were said about his case or the curious clauses in his will, he could be identified by anyone. And in one case in a thousand accidental identification may take place. Everyone remembers the venerable "Chesterfield" of the cardinals, who told an admiring circle of ladies that the fatal confession he ever heard was one of murder, and how his remark was interrupted by the entry of a prince who at once proceeded to remind his old friend, the cardinal: "It was your first patient."

As a matter of fact confessions are very seldom accidentally betrayed in that manner; but people imagine they are, and that is enough to make general professional talk give a sense of insecurity.—London Spectator.

NOT FOR HER.
The Only Trouble Was That He Loved Too Well.

"Mine is not a common love." It was evening at the Twining mansion, says Harper's Bazar, and in the parlor the flickering rays of the suppressed gas jet but half revealed the outlines of two forms on the sofa, one of them that of a fair young girl, who, with head down, and with her wondrous dark eyes fixed upon the floor, was listening intently to the impassioned utterance of the young man at her side.

"No, Mildred," he continued, "when I first attempted to convey to you in my faltering and imperfect way the depth of this great love, which, like flood, had crept into every crevice of my heart and filled it to its uttermost, I could not do it that easily, for how deep, how lasting it was to be. But in full consciousness of its permanence, its power, its lasting quality, has been revealed to me, and I rejoice that I can say to you, we have taken the final and irrevoceable step, that you need have no fears of the quality of the passion which I feel for the one being who is and ever will be the dearest and best in all the world to me. And so, my darling, I repeat to you that mine is no common love. Well do I know what the love of the average man is. At first a fierce flame, it gradually goes lower and lower, perhaps dying out altogether. Absorbed in his ambitions, more and more occupied with the thought of getting wealth, of adding little by little to his income, he loses sight of the sweetest sentiments of life; he forgets the trifling endearments that mean so much to a woman. But with me all this is different. Day by day my love will grow stronger. No matter where I am, the thought of you will always be uppermost in my mind. I shall be with you as much as I can, and when I am away during my hours of toll, your face shall ever be before me, effacing all other impressions."

"Are you sure?" she murmured, half doubtfully—"are you sure, dear, that this will be so? Will you always consider your love before your business?"

"Always," he replied, his face unclouded, his rich voice betraying no tone of uncertainty—"always, my darling."

The girl at his side rose swiftly from her seat, and as she mechanically moved toward the chandelier, her hair falling on the gas to its full height, she replied:

"Then I'm afraid, George, that you won't do. The man I marry must do well and earn every other year."

Very Remarkable.

We hear often of the patience of the camel in its wonderful endurance. A camel travels at the rate of about four miles an hour. It can be made to go faster, but it can't run. It can't be made to go slower, but it can't walk. It can travel this pace for only two hours. If urged beyond that, the Asiaties say, they "break their hearts," for a camel over-driven lies down and dies.

Hopkinsville's Young Authors.

The little book of stories by Miss Florence Frances Brasher, which was recently put on the market here, is spoken of in words of high commendation by all who have read it. There are three stories: "In Day of Darkness," "When Deep Water Runs Dry," and "A Big Lesson." The two first are novelties of fifty or more pages, the last a short story. They are all written in a charming style, entirely free from affectation and bombast, common in children's books. They are well executed and hot overdone. Her characters well drawn and the plots admirably developed. On the whole the stories are interesting in their subject matter, pure in conception and delineation, well chosen and well told. Her descriptions are a girl of unusual talent—for she is still little more than a child—and the people of Hopkinsville, when they consider that she is dependent upon her pen for a livelihood, should encourage and help her by buying and disposing of her edition of her meritorious little book. It sells at the book stores, or may be ordered by mail.

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulence. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Osgood,

Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children which I am acquainted with. I hope the day is not far distant when we will consider the results of their children's use of Castoria. I have heard of the various quick nostrums which are destroying their lives over, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

Dr. J. F. Kinchlow,

Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,

118 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we have not had any cases calling for it, what we know of other products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria have us to look with favor upon it."

DRIVEN INTO HYSTERICS.

Young Woman Becomes frantic at the sight or presence of a Cat.

It's a subject that is frequently talked about, but it is a fact that the natural antipathies between certain persons and certain animals furnish fresh food for the amusement of the public. Everyone knows well enough the aversion that the majority of people have for snakes—the horrifying dread that their presence excites. Many persons also "hate cats," as they term it. Their soft, stealthy movements excite a distinct and frequent amount of alarm. It is seldom, however, that this is so pronounced as in a case which excited considerable comment in this city recently, says the New York Tribune. It was of a young woman who had always had a most unconquerable dread of the feline species, and who, naturally, could not endure the presence of one in the room without losing control of herself completely. She was so sensitive in this particular that her family declares that upon entering a room, if there was a cat concealed anywhere within it, she would at once detect it, and pronounced and uttered its name even at once would become hysterical. In fact, it was a standing joke on her that on one occasion like this she became absolutely terrified, and rushing up to a young man, who was a total stranger to her, seized him about the neck, sobbed desperately, and was too awfully ashamed of her weakness, as she called it, but declared she was absolutely powerless in the matter. A BANK PRESIDENT.

Mr. W. T. Nelson, president of the Second National Bank of Jackson, Tenn., says: For indulgence and nervous trouble, I have rather given up the use of any remedy I ever tried than King's Royal Gremutner. As a nerve tranquilizer, and restorative, it is not a narcotic in any sense, but produces the happiest effects upon the disordered nervous system. I consider it a most valuable remedy, and have for years been using it to my friends."

"Life appears to be a desert to you?"

"Yes, a reg'lar desert, with sand a foot deep."

"Your loneliness—in the seeming emptiness of your life—but it occurred to you that you could do something to add to the happiness of your fellowman?"

"Yes, it has."

"And what do it?"

"Well, it's been months now since my wife was taken away and if you'll point me out a woman about forty years old who wants to get married I'll pop the question so quick that it will make her heels lift up. You better life I want to do something for my felicitous self. I've written right back to take another sight of a woman whom I've followed for three miles and winked over a dozen times."

There is one curious fact respecting the animal creation with which you will never become acquainted if you depend on your text books for information.

A LITTLE SURPRISE.

THAD been married just a twelvemonth and, as I believed, had got the very dearest little morsel in the world for my wife. The year just concluded had in consequence been the happiest of my life, and I resolved to make my partner a little present in remembrance of the event which had made us one for life. As I know how much more delightful a gift becomes when it is unexpected, I said nothing of my intention, wishing to take her quite by surprise. The accompanying narrative will, I think, show how completely I succeeded in that endeavor.

My business lay in the city, whether it was my custom to travel every morning from the quiet of a little suburban home to the noisy bustle of an early dinner in the early evening. It was my invincible practice to carry with me a small Gladstone bag, and on the day in question, after placing into this, along with a few other things, the articles I had purchased for the purpose, I fastened with a large gold bangle, a pendant for the neck by rubby star attached, and a small diamond brooch. I took train at Cannon street in the very lightest of spirits on my journey home.

Seating myself in the corner of the first-class carriage in which I sat, with my bag in hand, I waited for a time the only occupant of the compartment, but as the train was on the point of starting I was joined by a person of very gentlemanly exterior, faultlessly dressed, who stepped into the carriage with a quiet concern. Like myself, he carried a bag, and I noted not at all striking in itself, but noticeable on this occasion by the solicitude which it seemed to cause its owner, who, seating himself opposite to me, first put the thing under the seat, then by his side, and finally elected to carry it with him, and, finally, to leave it with me.

It was not long before we were in conversation. The season of the year was late summer, and the subject that naturally suggested itself was that of holiday-making. My companion had evidently traveled a great deal, for he discussed the subject with great interest, not only comprising adventures in the Alps, trips up the Rhine, and excursions into Italy.

He told of the beauties of the Riviera, the delights of Baden, and the glories of Berlin, and was equally interested in the charming country of France, and the beauty of Italy. "But, after all, there are no women like the English," concluded my companion, more quietly; "they may lag behind the continental girls in the matter of personal beauty, but depend upon me to make up for it in all other qualities."

This was quite in accordance with my tastes, for my little wife at home was, I am proud to say, an English girl, and fully bore out his estimate. I warned my companion at once on this subject, however, that before I had informed him a good deal about my private life, drawing a glowing picture of my country home, and the little genius who, like an angel, presided over it. He appeared so interested that I even went a step further, and told him that my wife was not only not too old, but that this was the anniversary of my wedding day, but that I was intending to surprise my wife on my return home with a little unexpected present. In exchange for this frankness my companion also became confidential.

"Well, hold on to that," he said, speaking a trifle louder than usual, "and I'll hold on to this."

"Hold on to what?" he asked, leaning over toward me. "This bag which I hold in my hand contains jewelry worth close on ten thousand pounds sterling, would you?" Ah, you look surprised! And yes it weighs but very little. Try it."

"Jewels are not necessarily heavy articles," I said, balancing the bag again, which seemed no heavier than my own. "But," I added, smiling, while a flutter passed through my frame, "I'm holding on to this bag in my hands with such weightiness, it is none too wise to trust a stranger with so precious an article as this, is it?"

"I'm afraid you're right," he said, speaking again with a smile. "I'm holding on to this bag in my hands with such weightiness, it is none too wise to trust a stranger with so precious an article as this, is it?"

"Oh, I have no fear of you," he replied, with a charming candor. "I think I know a rogue when I see one. In this life I have seen many, but this is the first time I have met one."

"Well, hold on to that," he said, with a smile. "I have a good many of my own friends, and I know how it feels. You seem to be all alone in this great world."

"Yes, that's the feelin'."

"Life appears to be a desert to you?"

"Yes, a reg'lar desert, with sand a foot deep."

"Your loneliness—in the seeming emptiness of your life—but it occurred to you that you could do something to add to the happiness of your fellowman?"

but the man had gone out of sight, and I sat down again with a feeling akin to disappointment. In ten more minutes I was at my own stopping place, with my thoughts and steps both homeward turned. The brightness of the evening and the lightness of my heart made my step quicker and more elastic than usual. Finally, Bubby did come gaily, easily, to my wife, who reached home by a familiar nickname, "you know what to-day is."

"Our wedding-day," was her quick response.

"And I've got a little surprise for you!" exclaimed my wife, simply clasping her hands in delighted excitement. "I am so ingenuous already. That's the secret of my success."

"See for yourself," I said, handing her the bag and my bunch of keys at the same time. "Unlock the bag and see what it contains."

"I knew it would be welcome news."

"You dear creature, how kind of you!" exclaimed my wife, smiling broadly. "I am so ingenuous already. That's the secret of my success."

"I can't move it," she replied.

"Give it to me!" I said, and took bunch and bag from her.

"How tiresome! How tiresome!" I groaned, and, or both, whatever the reason, I was no more successful than she. I wriggled and twisted until I got myself into a state of perfection. "What are you waiting for?" I asked, presently, as Bubby seemed a long time in getting the bag open.

"I can't move it," she replied.

"Give it to me!" I said, returning her kiss.

"I can't move it," she replied.

"Give it to me!" I said, and took bunch and bag from her.

"How tiresome! How tiresome!" I groaned, and, or both, whatever the reason, I was no more successful than she. I wriggled and twisted until I got myself into a state of perfection. "What are you waiting for?" I asked, presently, as Bubby seemed a long time in getting the bag open.

"I can't move it," she replied.

"Give it to me!" I said, returning her kiss.

"And I've got a little surprise for you!" exclaimed my wife, simply clasping her hands in delighted excitement. "I am so ingenuous already. That's the secret of my success."

"See for yourself," I said, handing her the bag and my bunch of keys at the same time. "Unlock the bag and see what it contains."

"I knew it would be welcome news."

"You dear creature, how kind of you!" exclaimed my wife, smiling broadly. "I am so ingenuous already. That's the secret of my success."

How to Prevent Gout.

Some reading that will prove interesting to young mothers. How to guard against the disease.

Croup is a terror to young mothers and to post them concerning the cause, first symptoms and treatment is the object of their interest. The origin of croup is a common cold. Children who are exposed to it take cold very easily and croup is almost sure to follow. The first symptom is hoarseness; this is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough, which is easily recognized and will never be forgotten by one who has heard it. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is freely given all tendency to croup will soon disappear. Even after the croupy cough has developed it will prevent the attack. There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains nothing injurious. For sale by R. C. Hardwick, druggist.

The Christians who do not walk by faith will have many falls.

A Sound Liver Makes a Well Man.

Are you bilious, constipated or troubled with jaundice, sick headache, bad taste in mouth, foul breath, coated tongue, dyspepsia, indigestion, flatulence, &c. It is dangerous between the shoulders, chills and fevers etc. If you have any of these symptoms, your liver is out of order, and your blood is slowly being poisoned, because your blood does not act properly. Herbin will cure any disorder of the liver, stomach, or bowels. It has no equal as a liver medicine. Price 75 cents. Free trial bottles at R. C. Hardwick's drug store.

Don't work to late at night to be alone with God early in the morning.

BALLARD'S SNOW LINIMENT.

This available remedy is one that ought to be in every household. It will cure your rheumatism, neuralgia, sprains, cuts, burns, bruises, sore feet and ears, sore throat and chest. If you have lame back it will cure it. It penetrates to the seat of the disease. It will cure stiff joints and contracted muscles after all other remedies have failed. Those who have been crippled for years have been made well by this Liniment. Price 75 cents. Free trial bottles at R. C. Hardwick's drug store.

Only that is well which ends well.

No HUMOR.

Foley's Honey and Tar does not claim to perform miracles. It does not claim to cure all case of consumption of asthma. But it does claim to comfort and relief in advanced stages of these diseases. It is certainly cure for stage. It is certainly worth trying by those afflicted or threatened with these dread diseases. 50c For sale by C. K. Wyly.

The devil would never get another soul if he couldn't make them look white.

Exposure to cold, damp winds, may result in pneumonia unless the system is invigorated by Hood's Sarapilla.

Six weeks ago I suffered with a very severe cold; was almost unable to speak. My friends all advised me to consult a physician. Noticing Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advised me to go to St. Paul, Minn. I procured a bottle, and after taking it a short while was entirely well. I now most heartily recommend this remedy to anyone suffering with a cold. W. M. Kell. 678 Selby Ave. St. Paul, Minn. disease by the timely use of Tutt's Liver Pills, an old and favorite remedy of increasing popularity. Always cures SICK HEADACHE, sour stomach, malaria, indigestion, torpid liver, constipation and all bilious diseases. TUTT'S Liver PILLS

The Case Similar.

Prompted by the feeling that it was his duty, the bishop remonstrated with one of his clergy for attending a local hunt. "Well, your lordship," replied the offender, "I really do not see there is any more harm in hunting than in racing." "Aha!" said the bishop, "you have availed your lordship, the you refer to me as the 'ecclesiastic.' Those who attended Lady Somerville's evening were among the clerical party, but the hunt was easily laid aside. Then the bishop sat down and silence reigned.

What is a GUARANTEE?

It is this: If you have a cold, a tickle in the throat, which keeps you constantly coughing, or if you are affected with any chest, throat or lung trouble, whooping cough, &c. and you are a man, as I am, then go to a doctor, and he will prescribe a medicine.

"Please tell me what particular thing you find fault with?" said Mrs. Bowser, as she realized that he had been a bad day at the office and wanted to get square by pitching in to her.

"What particular thing? Millions of particular things!" he almost yelled as he wheeled around on her. "Mrs. Bowser, I wear socks!"

"Yes, I know." "I hadn't reached the office when my right heel began to hurt, and I have been a martyr all day. What was the reason? Holes in my sock—great, big, yawning holes which any other wife would have discovered and mended! What are you smiling about?"

"Mr. Bowser, we overslept ourselves. You hurried down and got a bite of breakfast, but it was gone before you got up. Instead of having holes in your sock you managed to pull one of my stockings over your foot. That's what hurt your heel all day."

"Deny it! Deny it in toto! I may have my failings, but I am not an idiot! Put on one of your stockings! Don't try to crawl out of it that way, Mrs. Bowser! I'll soon show you that I know what I'm talking about!"

He sat down and unfastened his shoe and kicked it five feet away. Then he pulled up the leg of his trousers, and there was his foot in Mrs. Bowser's stocking, or about half-way in it.

" Didn't I tell you so?" she exclaimed. "I found your sock and missed my stocking when I got up to dress."

"Mrs. Bowser," he said, as he pulled the stocking off and got up and limped about, "what do you think of a wife who'll send her husband out among men with such a handkerchief as this? Gaze on it! Is that a handkerchief or a table napkin? Imagine my feelings as I pulled it out on a crowded car to wipe off my chin!

When table napkins are placed among my handkerchiefs, haven't I a right to complain of the way this house is run?"

"It was never placed there!" she spiritly replied. "It was your napkin at breakfast. You left your handkerchief on the table and put the napkin in your pocket. Anything else?"

"Anything else! I should say there was! If you were the right sort of wife wouldn't you have noticed that one of the buttons was off this vest and been prompt to repair damages? Did you notice it? Not You were too busy with some love-sick novel!"

"There is no button off your vest," she quickly replied after a brief inspection. "In your hurry you botched your vest wrong. See? The top button is in the second button-hole. No wonder you felt wizy-wazy!"

Mr. Bowser was stuck, but it wouldn't do to give in, and waving his arms around he cried out:

"Not only socks with holes in and missing vest buttons, Mrs. Bowser,

The Old Man Comes Home in a Bad Temper.

A Hole in His Stocking Causes Much Unhappiness—Trouble with His Wife—Other Grievances Arised in an Unnameable Manner.

When Mr. Bowser let himself into the house with his latch key, Mrs. Bowser was sitting in the back parlor. She knew by the way he banged the door shut and scurried around the hall that something had happened, and herself never up to meet it. She greeted him a hasty greeting, but he glared at her in a rather stern and growling manner.

"Never mind putting yourself out for this special occasion, Mrs. Bowser! After dinner I want to have a talk with you!"

"Has anything happened, dear?"

"You will be informed in due time. I suppose dinner is half an hour late as usual?"

"Dinner has been ready for five minutes, dear. You have never had to wait over five minutes for dinner since we were married."

He scuffed into the dining-room and took his place at the table with the demeanor of a boy threatened with a licking, found fault with everything at the board, and left most of Mrs. Bowser's questions unanswered. Her policy was to smooth away the clouds, but he wouldn't have it. When they had finished the meal and returned to the family room his pent-up feelings burst forth, with:

"Now, then, Mrs. Bowser, I want to know whether this house is run by the superintendent of some idiot asylum or by the woman I made my wife several years ago to take care of my home?"

"Why what's wrong?" she gasped.

"Everything is wrong!" he shouted as he plumped down on the lounge and bobbed up again. "If I should try to run a herecot on your system of managing this house every blamed hen would be dead in a fortnight! There's no real system—no management—no nothing, and I tell you I don't propose to put up with such a muss any longer!"

"Please tell me what particular thing you find fault with?" said Mrs. Bowser, as she realized that he had been a bad day at the office and wanted to get square by pitching in to her.

"What particular thing? Millions of particular things!" he almost yelled as he wheeled around on her. "Mrs. Bowser, I wear socks!"

For the fourth week the total gross earnings were $337,569, an increase of $21,110 over the corresponding period of last year. For the month of October the earnings were $1,982,229, an increase of $87,100 compared with October, 1894. The Louisville and Nashville is now doing nearly as much business in 1895, when the earnings were in 1895, when the earnings were the largest in the history of the company.

Hon. James A. McKenzie, of Marion, Indiana, purchased of C. W. Potter 4 acres of land on the Scottsville Pike, two miles from Marion, $1,150. This is about $37 per acre. This is one of the most beautiful tracts of land in Warren county, and upon it Minister McKenzie will erect a handsome residence when his term of office shall have expired. There he will return and spend the remainder of his life.

This tract is bounded on three sides and the land deeded to Mr. McKenzie, but Mr. Potter will not give up possession until the 15th of January 1896.—Bowling Green Democrat.

According to the latest figures, the Republicans have 69 members of the Legislature, including one from whom it is a Populist. This is one half of the General Assembly, there being 68 Democrats and one straight Populist.

The repub. can have a majority in the House and of course would not hesitate to unseat Democrats enough to give them the two or three votes needed to elect a senator.

Senators Blackburn will be the cause of some trouble and there are some Democratic who are Republicans on the Democratic question who could not be relied upon to vote for a straight out Democrat like Blackburn.

IMPORTANT TO TEACHERS.

A circular letter from State Superintendent Thompson received this morning states that no check could be sent for the November draft of the school fund—the third check is safety school—and that the teachers' salary is due, however, that part of the school fund can be sent Nov. 11th, which will enable me to make a partial payment to the teachers next Saturday, Nov. 16th. Forty per cent of the school fund has been sent so that all teachers who have not already done so, can draw their salary for the first two months.

I am very sorry of this delay in sending the money, and regret that I was not notified in time to save the teachers' disappointment and inconvenience arising therefrom. The reason assigned by the State Superintendent is the extension of time by the new law for making the first four payments, so that teachers that did not do so in their interest are being done, and he hopes the State Treasurer will soon be able to pay in full.

Very truly,

KATE MC DANIEL, Co. Sup.

AT THE ONCE.

There are already two active candidates for the position of steward of the Asylum, although Mr. J. C. Buckner's commission does not expire until April 1897. They are Mr. J. F. Rogers, of the Banner, and Mr. J. W. Wicks, and both are progressing upon the idea that Gov. Bradley will do more for the Asylum than all the Democrats found in opposition offices. He has been prominent and active—Repub. and they will press their respective claims in an energetic manner.
